

BOOK TALK

BRADLEY TUSK DISCUSSES HIS NEW BOOK

From Bradley Tusk — political strategist, philanthropist, and founder of the Mobile Voting Project — comes an informative analysis of and fix for America’s broken politics. Tusk argues that letting people securely vote on their phones is the solution to increase voter turnout, reduce extremism, and save our democracy. In conversation with Ben Max, program director for NYLS’s Center for New York City and State Law, Tusk will discuss and sign copies of his new book, which includes guest essays from Martin Luther King III, Nevada Secretary of State Cisco Aguilar, and leading cybersecurity experts.
